STEAMER ENCOUNTERS BAD STORM ON THE OPEN SEA

MOUNTAINOUS WAVES TOSS OFFICERS ABOUT DECK AND SEVERAL STEERAGE PASSENGERS ARE INJURED.

NEW YORK, Dec. 27.—One of the worst storms which has swept the Atlantic ocean during the past six years was encountered by the Naples-New York liner San Giorgio, which arrived in port today.

Mountainous waves broke over the vessel, throwing the captain and officers about the deck and injuring several of the steerage passengers.

Clyde Morgan came down from Jacksonville Tuesday to spend Christmas with his mother and sister at the Morgan hotel. He intended to return to Jacksonville Thursday afternoon, but missed the train and was obliged to remain over until today.

The Misses Eva and Isabel Jackson went up to Jacksonville Thursday to meet and return with Miss Madeline Jackson, who is expected from Washington, D. WASHINGTON, Dec. 27.—A movement for the abolition of the Inauguration ball will be started in the house, according to the statements made by several congressmen today. LONDON, Dec. 27.—Conflicting reports come from the battle which has been raging for three days around Janina between the Greek and Turkish armies. The Greeks declare that the fall of the Turkish stronghold is imminent, and the Turks announce that the defeat of the Greeks is certain, and that there has been a great loss of life. PRESIDENT TO PASS HERE NEXT MONDAY

SPECIAL TRAIN EXPECTED TO ARRIVE ABOUT 11 O'CLOCK

CHIEF EXECUTIVE AND PARTY WILL REACH KEY WEST FROM SOUTH SUNDAY AFTERNOON AND LEAVE AT 7.

President Taft and the party which accompanied him on his trip of inspection to the Panama canal are expected to pass through Daytona in a special train about 11 o'clock next Monday morning.

It has not yet been definitely learned whether arrangements can be made for the special train to stop in Daytona for a few minutes, but efforts are now being made to have the train stopped at the depot long enough for the people to at least get a look at the nation's chief executive.

The presidential party will reach Key West on the battleship Arkansas about 2 o'clock Sunday afternoon and the schedule calls for the party to remain in the Island City about five hours, leaving there for the rail trip to Washington about 7 o'clock in the evening.

The arrival and departure of President Taft at Key West will be to the accompaniment of the presidential salute of 21 guns and the city will be gaily decked with flags and bunting for the occasion.

After the president and party had left Colon a wireless message was sent from New Orleans asking the executive to change the course of the battleship and make the landing at the city on the Mississippi, but President Taft replied his plans could not be changed and that he would land at Key West. He must be in Washington in time for the annual New Year's reception at the White House.

B. J. Miller and wife and B. A. Grisard, wife and daughter, stopped over in this city Christmas day for a brief visit with Dr. and Mrs. S. W. Carroll and family. Mrs. Grisard is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Miller and the party were returning from an automobile trip to Miami and were on their way to their homes in Winchester, Tenn. They were firm in their declaration that in their journey down the coast they had seen nothing that in their opinion could compare with Daytona. They were Daytona visitors three years ago and at that time stopped with Dr. and Mrs. Carroll. Mr. Miller is a large dealer in poultry and eggs and is also interested in the growing of citrus.

The Black Patti show, which comes to the New Daytona theater for one night, Wednesday, Jan. 1 in "Captain Jasper," grows in favor at every performance. It has reached its stride for speed, and the management has been compelled to cut out intermissions on several occasions, owing to the numerous encores and bows. No time is lost passing from one number to another, or a song here and a dance there. Captain Jasper is the same all the time—up to the top notch of satisfaction. It is one riot of mirth, melody and color.

News from Fair Florida Briefly Told

Efforts to organize a military company in Sanford are not likely to materialize because there is no building in the city suitable for an armory. Major Harry Snow of the state ordnance department recently visited the city, and after a thorough inspection of the city decided no suitable building could be secured. Major Snow carried to Sanford the commissions of the captain and two lieutenants for the new company which the citizens hoped could be organized.

GIBRALTAR NEVER IS ASLEEP
Guns of the Great Fortress Are Kept Trained Constantly on the Surrounding Waters.

While it has always been known that Gibraltar, which belongs to Great Britain, is one of the world's strongest forts for both defense and offense, it seems incredible that an immense fleet could be sent to the bottom before getting within five miles of Gibraltar. Not even a torpedo boat could succeed in entering the bay unobserved on the blackest night. The most eminent naval experts are of the opinion that this world's greatest fortress is almost impregnable.

Gibraltar never sleeps. By day and night two perfectly equipped signal stations, proudly flaunting Britain's flag of ownership, sweep the seas around to a distance of 15 miles on a clear day, instantly reporting the coming and going of each vessel.

Modern "needle" guns, the finest in Europe, are installed on all the most prominent points. They are unreachably from the sea, even as they are indiscernible, owing to the skill with which they are planted and draped to match the surrounding vegetation, while huge screens drop automatically before them as each shell is fired. They have a range of 15 miles and could drop shells on Ceuta, in Africa, opposite, quite comfortably.

One gun weighs 110 tons and is capable of throwing a shell weighing three-quarters of a ton. In that marvel of engineering under great difficulties, the galleries, are concealed guns for every day in the year.

These galleries are divided into three sections, entry to which is guarded, while one is closed even to high officers, containing preserved stores, munitions of war, rain water (for Gibraltar has no springs) and a complete condensing plant—all calculated to outlast a siege of seven years.

The firing is the most mathematically perfect imaginable. The surrounding waters are mapped out into squares, upon which certain guns are kept ready trained, so that it is almost impossible to miss.

Put Away Small Things.
Get rid of small wisdom and great wisdom will shine upon you. Put away goodness and you will be naturally good. A child does not learn to speak because taught by professors of the art, but because it lives among people who can themselves talk—Chuang Tzu.

The management and guests at the Windsor combined their efforts and talents to make Christmas for the away-from-homes a pleasant day. Immediately after breakfast in the tastefully decorated dining room, the big family gathered in the parlor and held a Christmas tree. Congressman Martin of Colorado, who had previously been elected Santa Claus, presided, and the little daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Baker acted in the capacity of messenger. The stores during the preceding days had been scoured for appropriate presents. These were distributed by the genial Santa with fitting remarks. The congressman, who is an astute and persistent fisherman, received a fishing pond on which to practice during off days, and a miniature alligator, he having in an unguarded moment expressed a desire for one of "them 'ere' birds. Major Marlatt's heart was made glad with a juvenile sword outfit and immediately showed his military training by marching up and down the halls.

Charles Wittstein of Newark, N. J., was the recipient of a tin drum and the din of the tin was very much in evidence forthwith. I. B. Kilburn, also from the Mosquito state, was made happy with a tin horn with some witty remarks by Santa concerning the advisability of blowing ones own horn. James Baker, while the senior of the family, became very much a junior, when presented with an enormous jack-in-the-box, and a small edition of the power yacht, Adelaide II. Frederick Baker rejoiced in a collection of toys and other Windsorites were remembered and many were the outbursts of laughter at their expense.

The remainder of the day was agreeably spent by the guests in various pursuits of happiness. The chef displayed his ability to tickle the palates of the guests at the Christmas menu served at 6 o'clock. Cards were the order of the evening, many tables being occupied by the fortunate guests and their friends.

All voted Manager and Mrs. Newman to be hosts of high calibre.

HE WANTED IT JUST RIGHT
Particular Young Man Had Utterior Motives in His Purchase of Box of Candy.

The expensively dressed young man threw away his cigarette and entered the confectionery store. "Put me up a two-pound box of your best chocolates," he said to the clerk who waited on him. "Make sure that they are your very best; I don't want any mistake."

"Yes, sir. These are the very highest grade."

"Come to think of it, you had better make it a five-pound box, instead. The same kind as those you showed me."

"Yes, sir, certainly."

"And make it mixed chocolates and bonbons. And let me pick out a box I like. Haven't you something with violets on it? She is particularly fond of violets, and I want this to be just right. No, I like that design better, the one in blue and gold. Let me have that. Here, be more careful about the way you do it up. No, there isn't any card to go. I will deliver it myself. Make a neat-looking package of it while you are about it."

The clerk did it up carefully, then passed it over the counter. As he took the bill in payment, he smiled ever so slightly, and remarked: "The young lady should be very much pleased with that, sir."

"Young lady nothing? That box is for my mother. I'm going to tackle dad for a new runabout tonight, and if I can get her over to my side I'll get it."

How Long a Lantern Will Burn.
A merchant at Olaf's filled a lantern with oil, lighted it and placed it in his show window, offering the lantern as a prize to the one who made the best guess as to the length of time it would burn.

A young woman guessed forty-five hours and won the prize. The lantern burned forty-four hours and thirty-three minutes. One man went to the trouble to work out the problem to a mathematical certainty, after figuring for an hour, gave the answer as three hours and eight minutes.—Kansas City Star.

A Radical Old Aristocrat.

"The old French aristocracy dies with me," cried the Princess de Valmont on her deathbed. She was a bitter old soul, who, born of a long line of uncontaminated ancestors and married to a noble of equally superfine strain, had, through her husband's death in financial difficulties, to marry her five children to "abominable persons" of high character, but with the blight of trade or industry in their blood. Her last years were made mournful to her by this pitiful descent, and just before her grandiose last utterance, looking with a bitter smile at her children and grandchildren in tears round her deathbed, she broke silence in the following terrible reflection: "We have here," counting on her fingers, "representatives of carriage making, wholesale grocery, confectionery, coal mining and the stock exchanges, and all grafted on the old tree of the De Valmonts."

The Value of Knowledge.

Mrs. Featherston had embroidered a gown for herself. Butterflies were the design, and she had made them look so natural that—so Mr. Featherston said—one would think they were actually alive. But Mrs. Featherston's little son was more critical. He regarded the decorative insects long and earnestly, opened his lips to speak and then, with remarkable self control for one so young, closed them again without speaking.

"Well, Frankie," said his mother at last, "tell me what you think of my butterflies."

"They are very nice, mother," replied he seriously, "but the next time you embroider butterflies would you mind putting the antennae on the other end?"—New York Press.

Osculation Conjugation.

Ram Slick once said that kisses were, like creation, made out of nothing and very good, and another American writer thus conjugated the verb "to kiss": "Buss, to kiss; rebus, to kiss again; pluribus, to kiss without regard to numbers; syllabus, to kiss the hands instead of the lips; blunderbuss, to kiss the wrong person; erebus, to kiss in the dark; omnibus, to kiss every one in the room."

Persiflage.

"Hello, Jones! I hear you were sick."

"Yes; I was threatened with a fever, but the doctor succeeded in arresting it."

"Ah! He arrested it for making threats, I suppose."—Exchange.

Concentration.

The weakest living creature by concentrating his powers in a single object can accomplish something; the strongest by dispersing his over many may fail to accomplish anything.—Carlyle.

Enough For Her.

Her Father—What are the young man's business prospects?

Daughter—I don't know that, pa. All I know is that he means business.—Boston Transcript.

The Cure.

Guest—Yes, my wife has been ill, but she is out again now. Hostess—What doctor did you have? Guest—No doctor at all. I bought her a new hat.—London Opinion.

Had Heard of It.

"There's one thing I want to see while I am in Europe."

"And that is?"

"The Hungarian goulash in session."—Exchange.

Toenail Surgery.

The reason why most attempts permanently to remove ingrowing nails fail is because they are not sufficiently radical, says a New Orleans physician in the Times-Democrat. The proper procedure is to anaesthetize the patient with ether or some other general anesthetic, then remove, surgically, the entire side of the nail which tends to grow wrongly. The anesthetic permits the surgeon to dissect out the entire section of the nail to its remotest attachments. One great difficulty about treating ingrowing nails is that the sufferer cannot be persuaded to wear a sufficiently roomy shoe to permit the new nail tissue to grow naturally. Thus do vanity and hygiene contend.

Eight Who Deserve Slaps.

Eight men who deserve to be slapped on the face: He who despises a man of power; he who enters a house uninvited and unwelcome; he who gives orders in a house not his own; he who takes a seat above his position; he who speaks to one who does not listen to him; he who intrudes on the conversation of others; he who seeks favors from the ungenerous, and he who expects love from his enemies.—From a Persian Saying.

DUTY ON HIS TOBACCO.

The Baron Evaded Paying It, and Yet He Wasn't Happy.

Dr. Wekerle, Hungarian minister of finance, had a country seat at Pils, near Budapest, where he was in the habit of spending his Sundays. His only piece of luggage on these occasions consisted of a small hand bag which never contained anything but the regulation bottle, four handkerchiefs and a traveling cap.

Returning one Monday to the capital the minister met a friend, a gentleman named Von Fischer, who was carrying a bag exactly the counterpart of his excellency's valise. Baron von Fischer smiled a thoughtful smile as he noticed the similarity of the bags and whispered to the minister: "My bag is filled with smuggled Turkish tobacco. You will be good enough to shield me against the custom house spies, I hope."

The minister looked serious. "I will do nothing of the kind," he said, and when the two gentlemen arrived at the Pest depot the minister beckoned to a custom house official and said: "My friend desires to pay duty on a lot of Turkish tobacco he has in his bag."

"His excellency is joking," cried the baron, who meanwhile had changed bags with the minister. "See, I have no contraband articles about me," and he opened the bag in proof of what he said.

The minister of finance looked perplexed for a moment, then he resolutely grabbed his friend's bag and said to the official: "Well, assess me for the tobacco, but be quick about it. I have no time to lose." The official acted on the suggestion, and the minister paid 3 florins and 50 pfennigs into the treasury of his own department. Then he jumped into the carriage and drove off, shouting out his thanks to the baron for his present of twenty pounds of excellent tobacco.—Argonaut.

Quite English.

George Broadhurst tells of an English shopkeeper, the soul of amiability. "You are an American, sir, are you not?" he asked. "Yes," said Mr. Broadhurst to save lengthy explanations. "Now, I have a conundrum that I always save for the Americans, because they say they are so deuced clever. When you put a billiard ball on the table, what is the first thing it does?" "Why, I don't know," said Mr. Broadhurst uncertainly. "Perhaps it waits for its cue." "Ah, that's very clever, very clever," countered the little Englishman, "but not so good as the real answer. The first thing it does is to look round."

Unintentional Frankness.

The eldest sons of British peers bear what are known as "cousin" titles when the head of the house has two or three and can spare an inferior one to his son.

Earl Winterton, a young English politician, has a keen sense of humor and can enjoy a joke on himself. He likes to tell the following:

Before succeeding to the earldom he was known as Lord Turnour, under which name he figured in some noisy scenes in the house. A few months after his father's death he was thus addressed at dinner by a fellow guest:

"I ought to know you, but I can't recall your name."

"Oh, I am Earl Winterton," was the reply.

"Of course, of course," said the other. "Why, I have been confounding you all the evening with that ass Turnour!"

A High Authority.

Curran, the famous Irish advocate, was one day engaged in a case in which he had as junior a remarkably tall and slender barrister who had originally intended to take holy orders. On the judge observing that the case under discussion involved a question of ecclesiastical law, Curran said, "I refer your lordship to a high authority behind me, who was once intended for the church, though in my opinion he was fitter for the steeple."

"A HIGH AUTHORITY BEHIND ME."

Ben Butler's Retort.

An old lawyer in speaking about General Ben Butler said: "Ben Butler was a terror and a torment to the judges. On one occasion Judge Sanger, having been bullied and badgered out of all patience, petulantly asked, 'What does the counsel suppose I am on this bench for?' Scratching his head a minute, Butler replied, 'Well, I confess your honor's got me there.'"

Henry Morgan, Prince of Pirates

COUNTRY

A boy, son of a Welsh farmer, was wandering about the docks of Bristol, England, starting at the odd waterfront sights, when he was kidnapped and carried aboard a ship bound for the West Indies. He was taken to Barbadoes and there sold to a planter as a slave.

The boy was Henry Morgan. He began his career as a penniless, ill-treated servant. By sheer villainy he rose to wealth and rank. Some writers say he ended his life in misery.

Central America and much of the neighboring territory were under Spanish rule. Greedy governors and heartless soldiers wrung vast treasure from the Indians and in other ways amassed untold fortunes for themselves and for Spain. Galleons would come from Europe with provisions, clothing, etc., and go home laden with precious metals and gems. Of course, these treasure ships attracted pirates as sugar attracts flies. And the Spanish Government kept powerful fortresses and warships in the New World to protect their wealth. The clash between Spain and the buccaneers was everlasting.

The word "buccaneer" means "a drier of beef." The buccaneers used to make a living by butchering and selling wild cattle, until the local Spaniards made life unpleasant for them. Then they took to the sea and proceeded to revenge themselves upon their tormentors by looting every treasure they could lay hands on. They were not, at first, common pirates, though "pirate" and "buccaneer" came afterward to mean much the same thing.

Morgan, escaping from slavery, fled to the island of Jamaica. There he joined a crew of buccaneers. By genius and cruel cunning he quickly became their captain. Then he joined his crew to that of a powerful buccaneer who called himself "Admiral" Mansfield. Mansfield soon afterward was killed; and Morgan was at the head of all the neighboring freebooters. His real life-work had begun.

He persuaded some of his companions not to throw away every penny of their gains on drink, gambling and finery, as had been their custom, but to save it for the expenses of a great expedition. Thus he quickly found himself in charge of the largest, strongest pirate fleet ever seen in the Spanish Main. The Spaniards had grown overcautious about risking their treasure ships in such dangerous waters. So Morgan decided to attack them by land. He swooped down on one rich fortified town after another, destroying its defenders or holding them for heavy ransom and seizing their treasure. In this way he soon became very rich.

Panama was the foremost treasure city in Spain's New World possessions. It was strongly fortified and lay far off the pirates' track. To reach it miles of poisonous jungle and Indian-infested forests must be passed. The place was deemed safe. And there many millions of dollars' worth of gold and jewels were kept. The hope of such wondrous plunder was enough to make Morgan try to do what every one had declared impossible. He turned from ravaging Cuba and the American mainland, and on Jan. 9, 1670, set out on the terrible river-and-jungle trip to Panama.

The Spaniards had word of his coming. All food supplies were removed from the route. The forests were alive with hostile savages. The hardy buccaneers endured daily starvation, fever and battle, but pushed on fearlessly until they came before the walls of the treasure city, Panama. There they thrashed a Spanish and Indian force more than three times the size of their own and rushed into the city. The mass of treasure was seized, the town burned to the ground and hundreds of captives held for ransom. Each buccaneer received only about $200 worth of plunder. Morgan kept the bulk of the hoard for himself.

As a feat of daring and of military genius Morgan's dash to Panama excited the wonder of the world. Morgan, however, was summoned to England to give account of his crimes. He went without fear. For, on England's throne sat King Charles II.—as great a blackguard as Morgan himself. The pirate chief arrived in London, had a private interview with the King, and, it is said, slipped a goodly share of his Panama winnings into the royal pocket. Thereupon, instead of being punished, he was made a knight and was sent back to the West Indies as Lieutenant-Governor of Jamaica and commander-in-chief of the British forces there. He married and lived a life of luxurious ease, sternly condemning to death those of his old comrades who were brought before him on piracy charges, and playing the rich aristocrat to perfection. He died in 1688 at the age of fifty-three.

AUTOMOBILE KILLS A DEER ON ROAD

A most unusual accident on a road near Newcomb, N. Y., resulted in the killing of a deer by a small runabout. The car, which was going at a good pace, struck the deer when the animal tried to cross in front of it. The car was upset, the gasoline tank exploded and the machine was burned.

KINGSTON.

KINGSTON, December 27 — The happiest man in town is Will Hamilton, for a bouncing baby girl has come to live at his house. The little lady has been named Marian Louise.

The Christmas entertainment at the church was attended by a large crowd and was very good. The tree and decorations were specially pleasing.

Rev. Mr. Partridge will fill the Methodist pulpit for the coming year. Mrs. M. J. Davis spent Christmas with her nephew, Wm. Leawith, of Orange avenue, Daytona.

Mrs. M. Bainter and daughter spent a pleasant Christmas with W. W. Armstrong and family of Cypress street.

Mrs. Holly McClelland is visiting her mother at Dover for the holidays. Wylie Melton and family went to Hastings on a Christmas visit to Mrs. Melton's mother.

Edward Archibald is home from the hospital where he has been on account of a broken ankle. He was able to go to the Ferndale for Christmas dinner, accompanied by his niece, Miss Daisy Archibald, who is spending the winter with him.

WAS HISTORIC OLD BUILDING

Mint at Philadelphia Was the First Building Erected by Authority of Congress.

In removing the foundations of the coinage building of the old mint, at Nos. 37 and 39 North Seventh street, some quaint specimens of oldtime building construction, including several curious vaults, were uncovered. The cellar in which the vaults were located was reached by heavy stone steps, supported by brick or stone arches, a method handed down from mediaval times. One of the vaults in which bullion was stored consisted of a vault within a vault, and was designed, it is said, at the time of the war of 1812 to conceal materials which could not be readily transported to other hiding places. Several small windows in the cellar were protected by heavy hand-wrought iron bars. These have been preserved, and will be added, along with other relics, such as locks and hinges, to the collection in Independence hall. In digging out an old well in the yard a number of copper coins, bearing the dates 1816 and 1818, were found, as well as a quantity of scrap copper from which the coins had been cut. From old papers relating to a lawsuit, found by Frank H. Stewart, president of the company which owns the property, it was ascertained that five buildings were originally included in the old mint, all of them grouped around the coinage building. It is an historic fact that this old structure, which was the last of these buildings to be razed, was the first building of any description erected by authority of the United States congress.—Philadelphia Record.

Climax of Red Tape.

This is a tale of a self-confessed murderer who wished to be arrested, as related by a writer in Le Matin, Paris.

Some time ago a man named Berge was stabbed to death at Algiers. Three men were arrested on suspicion, but, as they proved their innocence, they were released and the matter was shelved.

A few days ago a man called at the office of the local police commissary and said to that official:

"My name is Marius Yvorra. I killed Berce, and this is how I did it."

The commissary listened to the man's confession and said:

"You had better see my secretary."

The secretary also listened to the man's confession, and after a little reflection said:

"Now, look here, my good man, this is not the way to get arrested. You must write us a letter confirming the oral statement made to us. Then we shall be able to attend to you. Now, get along."

The man left the office, and, perhaps because he was not a good writer, he has not been seen since in Algiers.

Game A-Plenty.

If, as an American hunter of big game has demonstrated, half-bred mastiffs possess the courage to face and fight lions, why go all the way to Africa to hunt? There are plenty of dogs at home.—Cincinnati Times-Star.

AN INTERRUPTION

By ANNABEL BRINSMADE

Preparations were being made for a funeral in the Margot family. The body of Betty Margot, aged eighteen, was to be buried at 11 o'clock, and it was now 10. A great deal of sympathy was shown the family, for there were very sad circumstances attending the young girl's death. In fact, it was considered a case of suicide.

About a year before Betty began to show signs of despondency. She had left school and was ready to take a social position among the young people of the town in which she lived. Her mother, partly to divert her from her condition of mind, did what she could to induce her to do so. Betty did not refuse to go among those of her own age, but when with them, instead of being the bright, cheery girl of a year before, she was listless. The young men and maidens who had grown up with her endeavored for awhile to draw her from her lethargy, but, finding their efforts futile, at last gave up trying.

The family physician was, of course, consulted. He talked with Betty, asked her a great many questions, prescribed a tonic to be taken "three times a day before meals," but told her mother that he could find no organic disease. He thought that change of scene might be beneficial, but the Margots could not afford to take the patient away. Besides, she said she didn't care to go away. The doctor suggested that there might be a young man in the case, but Mrs. Margot declared that her daughter had never shown any preferences for any of her male acquaintances. To this the doctor replied that first love on the part of a young girl from sixteen to twenty was apt to assume very singular forms. He had treated cases of supposed physical malady which eventually had turned out to be simply lovesickness. One of his patients had shown signs of a breaking down in health simply because she could not make up her mind between two suitors and had finally eloped with a third, to whom her parent had no objection whatever.

One morning when the good lady went into her daughter's room with the usual toast and coffee—she would not permit Betty to arise before 11 o'clock—the room was empty. The bed had not been slept in. The frightened matron rushed from the room, calling her daughter wildly. The household, Betty excepted, responded, and eventually the whole town was roused.

The day passed with no word from the missing girl. She must have departed in the night, for no one had seen her go. Every village in the neighborhood received telephone messages describing Betty's personal appearance and inquiring if she had been seen. All her relatives far and near were notified. Not a hopeful word came from any point.

Mrs. Margot, after she became so far calmed as to express an opinion on the cause of her daughter's departure, said she believed that Betty's mind had been affected through some disease which "that stupid doctor" had failed to discover. The people of the town had many and diverse opinions. Mrs. Griffin, across the street, who had heard Mrs. Margot—an impatient, excitable woman—scold her daughter, averred that the latter had been driven away by cruelty. Some of the neighbors—old maids or married women who had adopted dogs in lieu of children—said that Betty had not been properly brought up and had gone to the bad.

One day a fresh impetus was given to these conjectures by the discovery of a body of a woman in the river. It was bloated beyond recognition, but it was about Betty's height, and the hair was about the same color as hers. The consensus of opinion was that it was her remains; that in a fit of temporary insanity she had escaped from home and drowned herself. The sight was so awful that the parents were persuaded not to look at it. An undertaker prepared it for burial, and this brings us to the beginning of our story, which is also the end.

Persons were assembling at the Margot home to pay their last respects to the dead. The clergyman had arrived, the undertaker was going about with soft tread giving directions in a modulated voice, when a young man and woman turned a corner and caught a view of the hearse and carriages standing before the door. The lady sank on the man's bosom with a gasp, but, recovering, the two pursued their way to the house of the funeral. The clergyman was mentioning some lovely traits of the deceased when the chief mourners uttered an exclamation of surprise and made a bolt for the hall, where stood the newcomers.

"Oh, Betty!" exclaimed both father and mother in a breath.

The obsequies were discontinued on account of the reappearance of the object for which they were held, and a great relief, a great joy, reigned in their stead. This was Betty's explanation.

"George met me when I was a schoolgirl, and we loved. Then that horrid Kate Baxter came between us, and for a long while I was afraid she'd get him away from me. But one day he wrote me that she had been telling lies about me, and I concluded to go and give her a piece of my mind. The result was that George and I thought we'd better be married. So here we are."

The doctor's diagnosis of the case was, "The insanity of juvenile love."

INTERESTING AND DRIVE POINTS WORTH VISITING

OCEAN BEACH—excellent resort north for 10 miles and about 15 miles to Mosquito Inlet and Government Lighthouse at Ponce Park. The beach is the most magnificent in the world.

BEED, KNOX & BEED ORANGE GROVE—18 miles, via Orange, one of the largest groves in Volusia county and is well worth visiting; can be reached by motor on fairly good road; can also be reached by boat.

NUMBER NINE ORANGE GROVE—large grove, passed on the way to the Beed, Knox & Beed grove is 12 miles from Daytona.

NEW SMYRNA—16 miles from Daytona, over an excellent hard surface road; this drive is said to be the prettiest in the state. New Smyrna are the ruins of an ancient fort and other historical spots, left by the colony of Andrew Turnbull.

OLD SPANISH MISSION—2 miles west of New Smyrna, reached by motor over good road. This mission is without authentic history but by many it is contended that this is the church built by Columbus on his second voyage to America. The altar is still extant, but at a later date the building was used as a sugar mill.

SPANISH SUGAR MILL—2 miles west of Port Orange and about 1 miles from Daytona; the machinery is still in a good state of preservation, although the mill is presumed to have been built and operated by the early Spanish settlers.

GOVERNMENT LIGHTHOUSE—at Ponce Park, 12 miles from Daytona, is reached by boat or by motor to the ocean beach.

MAMMOTH TREE—4 miles from Daytona; an abnormally large tree; reached by motor over hard surfaced road.

DELAND—25 miles from Daytona; the county seat of Volusia county and seat of John B. Stetson university; a very picturesque city; reached by motor over hard surfaced road.

TOMOKA RIVER—The scenic stream of Florida; reached by excursion boats which leave Daytona daily and run to the navigable head of the stream, 26 miles from the city. Generally a number of alligators may be seen in their native haunts. This is a trip no tourist should miss.

DELEON SPRINGS, 28 miles from Daytona; mammoth spring that throws out thousands of gallons of water a minute; a delightful bathing pool, and picturesque scenery. Spring is situated in an old plantation. Reached by motor over good road; a nice trip for a picnic party.

OAK HILL—hamlet, 10 miles south of New Smyrna; several orange groves in the locality; reached by motor over hard-surfaced road.

ORMOND—six miles from Daytona; here is located the Ormond hotel and a pretty town; nearby are the ruins of Spanish sugar mills.

TURTLE MOUND—26 miles south of Daytona; reached by boat; a mammoth mound of oyster shells supposed to have been left by a prehistoric race of people. Pottery and other antiquities have been discovered in excavating the shell.

PORT ORANGE—an attractive town 6 miles south of Daytona, can be reached by motor over hard-surfaced road; the trip one way may be made by the road and crossing the HIAWATHA river on the Port Orange bridge, the return can be made over the ocean beach.

CLARENDON GOLF LINKS—3 miles from Daytona and immediately north of the Hotel Clarendon at Seabreeze; the links are now in good condition. The Hotel Clarendon bears the distinction of being the only fireproof winter tourist hotel in the world.

GENERALLY, you may motor in any direction from Daytona and find places and objects of interest which your driver can explain to you; there are many by-roads through the sylvan vegetation that a visitor will greatly enjoy.

Wanted—Cheap Corks

If any ingenious person has a substitute for corks in champagne bottles he may be sure to win a very comfortable fortune for champagne corks are expensive, a really good cork costing as high as ten cents.The reason for this high cost is principally the length of time that must elapse before a cork grower can realize on his investment. Champagne corks are made only from the finest Catalonian corkwood. After the tree is planted 30 years must elapse before it is ready for the first stripping, but this bark is too coarse for champagne corks as is the second bark, taken off eight years later. Another eight years must pass before a champagne cork crop is gathered, making in all 46 years that the grower must wait before he can get any material return from his trees.Furthermore, champagne corks are cut by hand and not by machinery, as are less expensive corks, as they must be perfect in size and shape, or else the quality of the wine will suffer.—

England's 800 Silent Sentinels.
Around the British Isles there are now more than eight hundred lighthouses, silent sentinels of the sea, keeping watch and guard over ships that pass in the night. In the beginning of last century, or rather a hundred years ago, there were only twenty-five, and the illumination was inferior. Now some of these have a brilliancy equal to thirty million candle power, visible for a hundred miles under the proper conditions.

uncomplimentary ones, which can per Face," the "Brewer," are familiar examples.

No More Pudding.

Margaret, a little girl of four, was visiting her grandparents. There were a number of aunts who were somewhat careful of her looks as well as morals. When ready to go home Margaret said: "When I get home I'm not going to wash my feet, I'm not going to say my prayers, and I am not going to put pudding on my face."
